

Ice storage system

Ice storage systems make ice during the night when electric utilities charge less for energy. The ice supplements or even replaces mechanical cooling during the day and can result in significant operating cost savings