CITY COUNCIL PINPOINTS PROBLEM AREAS

Priorities: sewage, planning, roads

Herbicide protester hits Seattle bricks

Wendy Tringali, her case against the use of herbicides, was taken up by the City Council, according to the Capital News.

Kelowna's answer to the problem of herbicide use is to ban it. The City Council has passed a resolution to ban the use of herbicides in the city. The resolution was passed by a vote of 10-4.

Problems relating to sewage, planning and roads will be the major topics at the council's efforts, Council members spent an hour discussing them regular meeting Tuesday night. Sewage treatment plant, and there appeared to be no discussion about what they do.

Len said he would also like to see a recreational program as part of a long-term sewage program with a view to development as a long-term plan.
